Here is a thought from last week's homily: The Christian faithful are at liberty freely to found and direct associations for purposes of charity or piety or for the promotion of the Christian vocation in the world and to hold meetings for the common pursuit of these purposes.

I suspect more than a few people were relieved by the freezing temperatures last week. It is as if we grew tired of the fruitfulness of the earth. Enough is enough—stop blessing us!

Many years ago, a farmer's wife lost her husband to cancer. He was in charge of the farm, and she was in charge of the house. He had nothing to do with the shopping, and she had nothing to do with the business of the farm. They lived simply but comfortably. The 100-year-old farm house was cozy and clean and not falling down. Their vehicles were high-mileage but well cared for. Their clothing was simple—work clothes and church clothes. To the trained eye, the church clothes looked a lot like the work clothes but with no stains or patches.

By necessity and after his death, the widow needed to become familiar with the business of the family farm. She was overwhelmed to learn that they had millions of dollars in accounts all over the state and beyond. I remember one day she said to me in disgust, "Well, I just found another million." It was the same tone that I heard in your voices after you had canned all you wanted to can and filled the freezer, and there was still more to harvest: ugh, there is still more!

I know what you are thinking right now...you wish you had the problems of the farmer's widow. "Oh rats, another million!" Rather than wishing for someone else's burden, let's be grateful for the harvest. When abundance becomes a burden, we are missing something that God's wants us to have. Maybe Psalm 50 gives us the words for which we struggle, "[They] who offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving honor Me."

Right now and all the days of your life, offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving to God. If we can do this, there will always be enough, and we will know what to do with an abundance.
