Here is a thought from last week's homily: St. Therese fell asleep in the chapel during prayers in the monastery. During those times, she believed God looked at her as a parent watches a baby sleep—with love and joy. God loves each of you with the heart of a proud father.

Here is a note I received from a visitor last weekend.

Hello Fr. David,

Today I wanted to catch you at church; but forgot that you go to Callaway. After your sermon today on St. Terese, this is some knowledge that I received that I thought was pretty cool, :). This is it: As St. Terese wrote the wisdom and knowledge she received in a biography, so, too, does each of us need to write the knowledge that we each learn from the Holy Spirit on paper, so that after we have gone on to be with our Lord (hopefully), our loved ones left behind can use the knowledge and wisdom we learned to support them in their lives. Yes, we need to write so that the wisdom of God can be shared among all on their journeys toward the Lord. I thought this was a cool insight. :)

Also, I want to tell this to everyone: After listening to a talk on the Mass on Relevant Radio; this insight came to me, "that the same Holy Spirit that gave life to Jesus at birth, is the same Holy Spirit that brings life to the Eucharist in every Mass". Wow! I love that insight. This is why the creation of Life is so sacred. Well, Father, I just wanted to share these with you at church today, so I decided to just send you an email instead. Hope you have a splendid week with the Lord.

Special Collection, October 9, 2016

In response to the President of the USCCB, Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, we will hold a Special Collection on October 9 for the victims of the recent Louisiana flooding, joining the humanitarian efforts to support flood victims in Catholic dioceses impacted by the floods.
