Nobody seems to be born with much talent for forgiving...Yet people do forgive—ordinary people, not saints—and they do heal themselves of terrible pain...Don't expect gimmicks or techniques; look for signals and hints. Remember, nobody said it was going to be easy.

How People Forgive:
Slowly—It takes time...Sometimes you struggle with it so long that you cannot remember the moment you finally did it...we pass over the line without realizing we have crossed it...For some people, one definite decision is enough. For most of us, it is only a start on a long forgiving journey.

With a Little Understanding—A little understanding makes forgiving a lot easier...Sometimes, by understanding some of what was really going on inside the person who hurt you, you make forgiving a little bit easier for yourself...It also helps if you can understand yourself a little better—When you see your enemy and yourself in the weakness and silliness of the humanity you share, you will make the miracle of forgiving a little easier.

In Confusion—Most of us who work at (forgiving)...are muddlers and bunglers...To expect two people caught in mutual hate to sort out their pains is like asking a child to calculate the national debt...Full forgiving does not come in the twinkling of an eye. It comes in bits and pieces with an unexpected meeting here, a gesture there, the exchange of a greeting and a hint that better feelings are beginning to flow. We flounder into forgiving.

With Anger Left Over—Anger and forgiving can live together in the same heart...It is terribly unrealistic to expect a single act of forgiving to get rid of all angry feelings...Once you start on your forgiving, you will begin to lose the passion of malice...When forgiving begins...the malice that once hissed like what flame from an acetylene torch begins to fizzle.

A Little at a Time—Wholesale forgiving is too much for anybody...forgiveness that heals focuses on what people do, not on what people are...Ordinary people forgive best if they go at it in bits and pieces, and for specific acts.

Freely, or Not at All—No one can be forced to forgive. No one can truly forgive out of duty...You forgive in freedom only when you give other people freedom—to do what you don't want them to do at all...A free act is always a risk, one way or the other.

With a Fundamental Feeling—Forgiveness is fundamental to every other good feeling...It is a feeling of total acceptance...This fundamental feeling happens to you. It comes as you are open to it. You cannot create it; you can only be receptive to it. (From FORGIVE & FORGET by Lewis B Smedes)

Instrumentalists, we can use your assistance as well. We are looking for woodwind, brass, and string players. As with singing, additional instrumentation lifts liturgies to new heights of glory.
